'Sundowner Sessions' focusing on Mental Health during National Lockdown

During the current COVID-19 outbreak and lockdown, one's well-being is emerging as one of the top priorities from a mental health perspective. With physical distancing as one of the key tools to flatten the curve, one can feel boycotted and isolated, mentally and emotionally drained. Global survey suggest that this has been affecting the general well-being resulting in decline in mental health with increase in suicide rates and severe trauma for many.

COVID-Gyan website, which was set up by a consortium of institutions to create awareness about COVID-19 for the general public through infographics, posters, research articles, podcasts/videos etc.) is working to address this issue too with a view to bring in a more holistic approach of support during this crisis time.

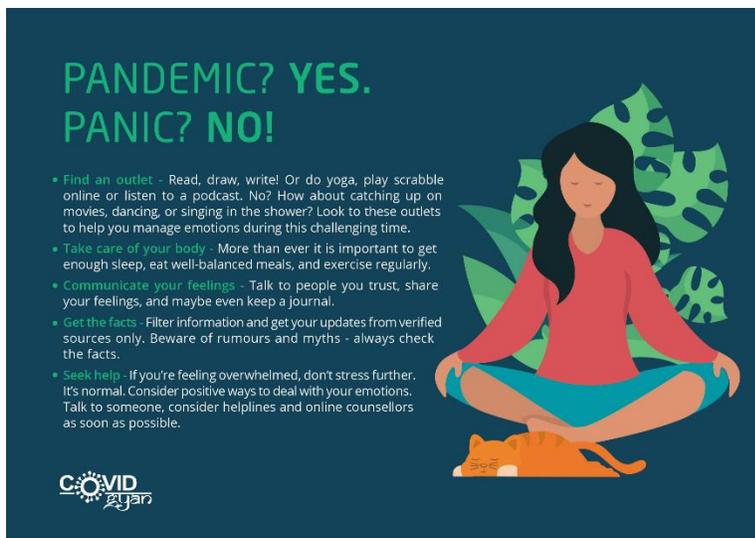

With evenings being the special periods of vulnerability, COVID Gyan has planned to bring a series of interactive 'Sundowner Session' with Rukmini Chawla Kumar (Author and Editor at Penguin Books). These sessions will focus on discussion of topics of relevance to the lockdown, readings from books/poems and most importantly some friendly conversations with 'humane' touch. The idea of these Sundowner Sessions is to create an engaging platform with a community, share challenges that one might be facing, get some tips on these, and spend some time in the company of others while maintaining physical distancing.

The first session was held on April 16, 2020 with the key topic of focus revolving around 'Living Alone during the lockdown' with guest, IshaLohumi a mental health researcher with an M.A. in Social Work in Mental Health. This is especially important for those who are living alone at this time and have to face a day of complete physical isolation. During this one hour session, participants expressed their trauma, shared their personal stories and coping mechanisms during this lockdown while the panelists addressed some of the concerns and suggested some tips to deal with this ordeal. This session was one of its kind because it made most of them feel that ‘everyone is in this together’. We are hoping that such community sessions would be helpful for common man, in general. The video recording of this session will be available on the COVID-Gyan website soon.

Well-Being Section on COVID-Gyan Website goes LIVE

A brand new ‘well-being’ section of COVID-Gyan also went live recently. Dedicated to several resources on well-being, including ways to deal with isolation, how to keep busy during this trying time, and more, this page of the website is going to bring in ‘all round’ approach in dealing with this pandemic.
